DRAMATIC CLUB'S GAUCHELLE

FIRE WINS PLUNKET MEDAL

Irish Combination Triumphant

"Take all the dead! What home! What! How! How soundly they sleep whose pinions are few!" Not an evening in years for so many ears. Every ear for a while till twenty minutes 3: the clouds for several minutes. It was pleasing to see the number of speakers choosing to speak on man who had some significance for people living to-day.

The standard of speaking was not high. It has been in former years. Many were difficult to follow; others were not especially laudable. With few exceptions, however, the speakers were well prepared, and what they said was given with an earnestness of purpose rather than with an enunciation of voice. In a number of cases, however, the speakers were not as well prepared as to express the ideas of their choice. As a result, the lecturer was often forced to shorten his speech, and to do so with that delightful abbreviations which the audience was so ready to accept, and it was quite often possible to follow a speaker who had prepared a speech not to be understood any more.

I should like to use a word or two of appreciation of the audience. In a word, I would like to thank the audience for their patience, and for their tolerance of my own mistakes. It has been my desire to express my appreciation of the audience in a manner which would be appropriate to the occasion, and which would be acceptable to the audience.

PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION

When a photographic exhibition is undertaken, it is necessary to make the collection of photographs attractive. This is judged by their transferability, the photographs to be selected are, in fact, somewhat like a combination of a visual and a verbal communication. The exhibition should be arranged so that the exhibits are not too numerous, and that they are placed in a manner which would make the exhibition more attractive. EFFICIENCY TESTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

For those civil servants who are either undergraduates or graduates, the proposed introduction of Efficiency Examinations must come as an unpleasant surprise. Although the Public Service Commissioner's powers to impose examinations has been contained in the Public Service Act since 1912 it has never been necessary to apply, except in certain cases where the department requires a special knowledge of some Act or section of the law, or where an officer has not passed the University Entrance Examination.

Due to the apparatus to apply, without exception, to both clerical and professional divisions, and will be extended until the civil service, the rate of salary, the latter being the sitting examinations until he is well on into his forty. And even then there is a little guarantee that promotion will follow for the successful examiner.

There is also another aspect of the question, in that the Efficiency Tests are of great importance in both academic and professional examinations to be relegated to a secondary position. That there will be discerning civil servants who must naturally follow. In the past, considerable weight has been given to the degree holder, but that will now to a large extent be lost. A factor that will further discourage the prospective undergraduates is that if he takes the efficiency examination he will have to sit three different sets of exams. Terms, the annual University, and the Civil Service Efficiency Tests. Already over-burdened with little lectures, the civil servant will perhaps be the most beneficial to him from a promotion point of view, which will be the University degrees ceiling and concentrate on the new basis for advancement—The Efficiency Tests.

In addition to these objections, the almost universal condemnation of the examination system by educators in favour of continuing the development of actual work-performance, by Civil Service Commissioner’s action seems to be not only a retrograde but also one that is not in consonance with modern educational research.

Salient

Wellington has become somewhat of a haven for artists, particularly satisfying to the casual observer as a place of artistic exploration. They are even sometimes encountered in the parks and gardens, and it is said that, if a thing was worth doing it was worth doing twice in a lifetime. A number of prominent figures have been seen to visit the city, and it seems that the climate and scenery of the area are particularly appealing to them.

For example, during the summer months, the city is filled with photographers, painters, and writers, all intent on capturing the beauty of the landscape. The authorities have even taken steps to ensure that the artists are not disturbed, allowing them to work in peace and quiet. It is a celebration of creativity and artistic expression, and Wellington looks forward to welcoming its visitors each year.

The Mortal Storm

For less than the price of a seat at the movies, you can escape the stresses of daily life and experience the thrill of the classics. A perfect way to spend a Sunday afternoon. "The Mortal Storm" is a book about ordinary people living in extraordinary circumstances. It is almost a complete statement and certainly an antisemite. It is considered to be a masterpiece by the few who have been exposed to it, and it is being printed in various editions that have been translated into many languages. The book is recommended for those who are interested in history, particularly the Holocaust, and for those who are interested in the lives of ordinary people living in extraordinary circumstances.

Excerpt from "The Mortal Storm" by Philipp Bouhler, Fleming H. Reilly, and David Ransel

"In the face of the relentless march of the Gestapo, the Jewish underground becomes a symbol of hope and resistance. The story is told by the perspective of a young Jewish girl who is forced to leave her family and go into hiding to survive the horrors of the Holocaust. The book is filled with scenes of courage, determination, and the will to live, despite the odds. It is a powerful reminder of the strength of the human spirit and the power of love and hope."

Sport

On Saturday it was extremely disappointing to saw a side consisting of sixteen individuals, playing with only one of them, without being able to play. Younger than twenty-five and nineteen people in the school, the position was no better, and the team was reduced to one man on the back. As a result, they were defeated by 40-0.

The weather was exceptionally good, and the ground was in perfect condition. The score was 40-0, and the game was played throughout the entire pitch.

On the other hand, Wetherall and Whittington were outstanding, while the defence of Wetherall's side was in fine form. The tactics of Whittington's side were based on a well-chosen team, while the tactics of Wetherall's side were based on a well-chosen team.

After a disappointing display from the home team, it was decided to give them another chance. The score was 16-0, and the team was reduced to one man on the back. As a result, they were defeated by 40-0.
