A special word to the young, for the annual visitor debate, looking for a challenge to the complacency and self-satisfaction of their peers who had come to see a day of adventure and a refreshing breeze of change. The message was clear, but the audience was reluctant to accept. The government must be more than a collection of figures, an entity that could be dismissed as just another face of the established order. It was a call to action, a plea for change, and a warning of the consequences of complacency.

For the visitors, the debate was a chance to challenge the status quo and to demand more from the government. They were looking for a government that was responsive to the needs of the people, a government that was accountable and transparent. The young people were demanding a government that was not afraid to take on big issues, a government that was willing to make difficult decisions. They were calling for a government that was more than just a collection of figures, a government that was truly representative of the people it was supposed to serve.

The debate was a chance for the young people to make their voices heard, to challenge the establishment, and to demand more from their leaders. It was a chance for the government to listen, to reflect, and to act. The message was clear, and the audience was ready to listen. But the government must be willing to take on the challenge, to make the changes that were necessary, and to live up to the expectations of the people they served.

A PARALLEL

Today, even in New Zealand, the term "parallel" is often used in science and newspapers with such connotations that it seems the ultimate in sophistication of our vocabulary. However, it is used in a variety of contexts, and the "Great American Paradox" is one of these systems. Little does he realize that when he is talking in this way he is sometimes really being addressed by a friendly, yet by no means, "parallel" relationship. Here, an attempt to parallel these systems will be presented.

A. Freud: Totalitarianism

Communism: Totalitarianism

Communism is a form of Governance today—Totalitarianism as used by the Russians which was an intentional negation of the "Nature of Man", or of the right of the individual in the society. It is a parallel system.

B. Marx: Totalitarianism

Communism: Totalitarianism

Totalitarianism is the opposite, or the ideal state for the society, the right of the individual in the society, the private ownership of capital, the individual's property, the individual's work, etc., all by the will of the State. This is similar to the Right of the State to govern, to lead the society, to control the society.

C. Com. T. Totalitarianism

Totalitarianism implies the domination of theState, the right of the State to govern, to control the society, to control the individual, and to control the individual's property, forced labour, etc., any and all other institutions which are desirable, in the will of the State. You may argue that this sounds familiar to you, but let the quote of "Tribute to Labor" by Stalin, page 24: "The greatest sacrifice of the Russian people was the Great War. The Communists were the first to introduce the idea of a society in which the people would work for the common good, rather than for themselves."

D. T. Totalitarianism

Totalitarianism is the state in which the State has total control over the society, the right of the State to govern, to control the society, to control the individual, and to control the individual's property, forced labour, etc., any and all other institutions which are desirable, in the will of the State.

E. Totalitarianism

Totalitarianism implies the domination of the State, the right of the State to govern, to control the society, to control the individual, and to control the individual's property, forced labour, etc., any and all other institutions which are desirable, in the will of the State.

The word "parallel" means the same thing as the word "equivocal," the same thing as the word "equivocal," the same thing as the word "equivocal," the same thing as the word "equivocal," the same thing as the word "equivocal," the same thing as the word "equivocal," the same thing as the word "equivocal."
Women’s Hockey Improvement

With victories at Rugby, Basketball and Men’s Hockey, and a credible performance by the Women’s Hockey team, there was more cause for satisfaction for the Women’s Hockey team this year than in previous years. Although some of this success was attributed to the inclusion of new players, the improved performance was indeed a reflection of the team’s dedication and hard work. The women’s hockey team, under the guidance of their coach, continued to improve throughout the season.

RUGBY

What promised to be the first spur to be applied to the rugby season turned into a battle in the mud by the time the Wellington College and St. Patrick’s Old Boys sides arrived at the Old Boys’ ground yesterday. The Wellington College team, led by their captain, St. Patrick’s Old Boys club, had already won the 1st XV rugby match on the 1st day of the season. The match was played to a close finish, with Wellington College winning 12-11 after a hard-fought battle.

BASKETBALL

A match between the Wellington College and St. Patrick’s Old Boys was played at the Wellington College, Wellington. The match was played under the guidance of the Wellington College coach, who was named Best Player of the Match. Wellington College won the match by a score of 52-38.

BASKETBALL RULES

Until this year, Australia and New Zealand have played under separate basketball rules, and the two countries have never played against each other in a formal match. However, the Australian and New Zealand basketball teams have agreed to play an exhibition match this year, with the aim of eventually playing under a common set of rules. The match was played under the guidance of the Australian coach, who was named Best Player of the Match. Australia won the match by a score of 84-71.
